

FIRST FIX.

Missed calls: turn every one into a text conversation

A call comes in after hours, nobody picks up, and by morning the caller has booked someone else. Your shop never knew the job existed. This fix catches every missed call within a minute, automatically.

THE FIX

1. Turn on missed-call text-back. When a call goes unanswered, your system texts the caller within a minute: "Sorry we missed you - what is going on?" The caller replies by text instead of calling the next shop.
2. Check what you already own first. If you run Jobber or Housecall Pro, the follow-up tools are already inside the software you pay for. They are usually off by default. Switch them on before buying anything new.
3. Write the after-hours reply once. One script for true emergencies ("Call this number now") and one for everything else ("We will call you first thing in the morning"). The on-call plumber only gets woken for real emergencies.
4. Read the replies every morning. Ten minutes with coffee. Every text-back thread is a job you would have lost. Book the real ones, archive the rest.

You may not need new software for this. Check what you already pay for before buying anything.

About half of home-service calls never reach a person (Invoca, 2026). What's your typical job worth? Losing a few of those every month - what's that doing to your bottom line?
